Alliance to Reclaim our Schools and its partners are planning a national day of action at local school sites on Thursday, January 19, the day before the presidential inauguration. Join us in calling on all elected leaders to commit to the American vision of public education.

Educators stand with our students and their families. We are calling on elected leaders to commit to students and communities in ensuring that our schools:

- Welcome and include all children, rather than isolating and dividing them based on their differences

- Serve as centers of communities and rely on community input, rather than turning over schools to private entities that take resources away from public school classrooms.

- Discipline practices that are restorative and without bias, rather than “zero tolerance” policies that abandon our most vulnerable students to a broken criminal justice system.
